

BRIEFS AND COLLECTIONS IN BUNBURY CHURCH

1665-1704.

(Part i)

A "brief" is a letter of authorities civil or ecclesiastical commending a charitable appeal. Few "original briefs have survived in this country but in most early church records the copies of briefs are to be found sometimes jotted on the spare pages of the Church Wardens accounts or occasionally written in a separate brief book.

After the Reformation briefs were issued by the Privy Council or (after 1660) by the Lord Chancellor, and came to the parishes in the form of "Letters Patent" which were to be read from the pulpit in Church. The Book of Common Prayer still contains the rubric after the Creed in the Communion Service which reads

"...And then also (if occasion be) shall notice be given of the Communion; and Briefs Citations, and Excommunications read."

These "good cause" appeals were usually for funds towards church repair and rebuilding in various parts of the country, helping those towns or persons who had lost property through flood, fire or earthquake, towards the ransoming of Christian captives taken by the Turks, or towards aiding persecuted Protestants overseas.

Although it was usual to make the collection in church at the close of the Sunday service (the clerk standing at the door with a "decent bason") the entries show that a house to house collection was sometimes organised as well which covered the whole parish. The sums collected were then handed over by the churchwardens to a duly authorised travelling collector or to the Chancellor at the time of the Bishop's Visitation.

Unfortunately it was a system which could easily be abused and in the hands of unscrupulous persons much of the money never reached and helped the causes for which it had been collected. Patent Officers, King's Printers and those who farmed the briefs taking the lions share. The abuse continued throughout the 18th century and eventually due in part to the action taken by Lord Shaftesbury a close inspection was ordered and the formation of the Incorporated Church Building Society in 1828 helped to abolish the system.

The earliest copies of Briefs preserved at Bunbury are grouped together and bound with the oldest surviving volume of Churchwardens' Accounts (1655-1709). They cover eleven leaves at the beginning of the book, one or two others having been destroyed, with the result that the earliest brief is dated Ap. 1665. Further references to Briefs and to those who brought them are made from time to time in the Accounts themselves and will be transcribed with them. They throw an interesting light upon the nature of 17th and 18th century good causes, and show by the amounts given where the sympathies of the Bunbury people most lay at that period.
